In the interview, Jon Sabes discussed the secondary market for life insurance and GWG's plans for growth in 2016.

"According to Milliman, 88% of all universal life insurance doesn't result in the payment of a benefit," said GWG CEO Jon Sabes. "If consumers were aware that there was a secondary market, and that there was value for these life insurance policies far and above than the cash surrender value, they would much rather turn to the secondary market for the value inside these policies."
